

A receptor in the brain detects that the water content of the blood is too low. Which of the following happens?