

There is a negative correlation between the growth of the world's human population and the rate of species extinction.