

We can tell whether a person is still growing by the amount of cartilage present in their bones.