

The rat in the Skinner box learns which lever gives it food and which gives it an electric shock. This type of learning is called classical conditioning.

