

The gene for fur colour in rabbits exists as two different versions: grey and white. The grey fur allele is dominant and the white fur allele is recessive. A rabbit is heterozygous for fur colour so it has grey fur.