

Living organisms called lichens can be used as air pollution indicators.