

The movement of food substances around the plant is known as transpiration.